

Short Profile

media:net berlinbrandenburg ranks among the biggest and most successful regional networks of the media and digital economy in Germany since 2001.

It plays a key role in the cross sectors and cross border networking of 450 members: From the established and globally active companies to the newly established, innovative start-up, we take care of all the players in the media and creative industries, IT and communications and industrial 4.0.

media:net represents its numerous member companies across industries and nations, including established and globally active companies as well as start-ups and young companies. Together with institutions, associations and opinion leaders from the economy, research and politics, media:net participates in shaping the economic framework of the region and takes up current topics and needs of its members with studies and surveys. A range of events offer further training with a practical orientation and valuable contacts. The aim of the independent association is the connection of players and the representation of its members' interests on state and federal level for the improvement of basic conditions.

Our Initiatives

berlin.digital offers support in the recruitment and onboarding of new employees to up-and-coming companies. In addition, berlin.digital sees itself as a mediator and stakeholder for the industry: through networking events, startups and high-growth companies meet allies from business and politics. <http://www.berlin.digital> games:net berlinbrandenburg connects the games industry in the capital region and supports big and small players with excellent contacts in business, politics and research. It represents, connects and supports big players as well as startups – and as a platform enables the dialogue to corporations, institutions, politics, science and universities.
